

Prioritize TCI-P benefits for communities hit hardest by COVID-19, poverty, and pollution

The 441 constituents below are in support of adding the following four policy recommendations to ensure that center equity is better centered in the final model rule for the implementation of TCI-P:

Dear TCI-P decision-makers,

We need a Transportation and Climate Initiative Program (TCI-P) that prioritizes program benefits for communities hit hardest by COVID-19, poverty, and pollution. The model rule sets a crucial regional baseline for how states can achieve this.

Please adopt these four policy recommendations to center equity in the final model rule:

1. Uplift community decision-making power by ensuring equity advisory bodies are made up of disproportionately impacted communities, have expanded responsibilities, and receive capacity support.
2. Ensure direct and meaningful investments for disproportionately impacted communities at a percentage that is significantly greater than their share of the population.
3. Promote access to quality jobs and training by incorporating high road labor and workforce development standards.
4. Commit to localized air pollution reduction and expanded air quality monitoring in pollution burdened communities.

The potential benefits of TCI-P are not guaranteed without detailed guardrails and targeted benefits. Include these equity provisions in the final TCI-P model rule to invest in the health, leadership, and economic opportunity of communities who need it the most.

						I have a 4-hour daily commute (2 in, 2 out) on public transit. The system is old, rickety, dangerous, and does not serve today's workers. It's also nearly $400/month, which is obscene. The whole thing needs to be re-thought. This seems like as good a time as any to put in that work to make a just transit system for everyone in the NorthEast region.

						Many rural regions are lacking transportation for people without driving ability. People with disabilities are at extreme hardship, especially when the county tells them to get to a central place for a county bus. This is actually quite insulting as well as useless. Cities also need better transportation facilities especially in the outer borders of the city where, again, there is no transportation and more private driving is needed to get needs met. The pollution issue gets compounded when people have to rely on private cars
